I have a stored procedure on the server that I'm developing as a task. The stored procedure contains an inner select statement and inside the inner select statement is an update statement. The idea is to take a sequential id from the main select statement (the id's are different between each select statement) and updating a column in the table with the value from another table. As it stands, when the procedure is called, a record is inserted into another table and the records from the table that my update statement is changing are updated. However, I want to be notified when it's hit so that I can log it. My question is, is there a way to have an event (or anything that can send a mail, for example) when the update is hit? Thanks in advance! A: Depending on the database, there may be options for this in the data flow. Otherwise, I am not familiar with any way to do this directly in SQL Server. EDIT: I found this: Cytochrome P450 1A1 and glutathione S-transferase genotypes in relation to vincristine lung toxicity. The cytotoxic effects of vincristine are linked to lung toxicity in cancer patients. Cytochrome

Francis was born on August 29, 1909, in Iowa City, Iowa. He attended the University of Iowa and University of Utah, and received a Ph.D. from the University of Washington in 1932. He married Mary J. Jordan in 1933, and they had two children, Mary Francis and James R. Francis. He began his career as a researcher in agricultural economics at the U.S. Department of Agriculture. He became a professor of economics at the University of Arizona in 1938. At Arizona, he wrote A History of Free Market Economics, which he prepared in conjunction with University of Arizona professor D. W. Brostoff. In 1977, he wrote a series of articles for the Arizona Republic (in 1977, he was serving on the Arizona Board of Regents), in which he debated proponents of the University of Arizona's business school with George Gallup. He was heavily criticized for his opposition to the business school.
