This is our 4th product update to help you on your way with our Docear organizer for Mac. At the end of February, we released an update to support macOS 10.10, which gave us the wonderful opportunity to introduce you to our latest update to Docear! Major New Features Our latest release includes a host of major new features for our best Docear yet. Docear can now also import all Office 365 Accounts We now support importing all Office 365 accounts for the new versions of Word, Excel, and PowerPoint. Whether you are a business owner or a freelancer, the ability to do this natively is an amazing feature. This makes it so much easier to create your own document without having to worry about opening Microsoft Office. Or use Outlook to import into Docear With the ability to import all your Office 365 accounts from Outlook, you now get the same experience when creating new documents as if you were in the new Docear application itself. The new legacy Docear website has also been migrated to Docear 3, our latest and greatest Docear for Mac. You will notice that the interface is updated slightly to match the look of the new application. Learn more at We've also made a few minor updates to the account management. You'll now be able to view your account login details as well as manage your account history. New import settings Along with the account import, the experience of creating documents has also been improved. The ability to quickly and easily import and edit multiple documents is now supported. The latest update to the dashboard interface has also been made to match Docear 3's interface.

Portable Docear was created for free collaboration and productivity; has been downloaded 10 million times and can be used by everyone. ...[Organic microcysts in the eye and their significance in diagnosis and treatment of uveal melanoma]. Many studies have been published on in situ hybridisation (ISH), immunohistochemistry and genetic diagnostics of uveal melanoma, but neither morphological nor clinical correlates have been described. We report the case of a 65-year-old patient with a subretinal, pigmented mass. After enucleation by means of transpalpebral cryo-excision the mass appeared as an ovoid, well-delimited, retro-choroidal tumor (1.0 x 0.4 x 0.3 cm), which was occupied by typical large, multilayered epitheloid cells. The surgically removed tumor was histologically identified as primary malignant melanoma of the iris with an exceptional amount of multilayered epitheloid cells, so-called soft parts. Additional positive reaction for HMB-45 and Cam 5.2 and a large mutation spectrum of the tumor DNA verified the diagnosis. The patient remains tumor-free after 3 years of follow-up. This case demonstrates the importance of careful evaluation of morphological and genetic features of in situ hybridisation and immunohistochemistry of uveal melanomas.

New York City's transit system is taking a major step forward today as Mayor de Blasio signs a plan to spend a record amount of money on repairs. De Blasio says today's marked improvements are "a big step in the right direction for our city's transit system". The mayor hailed the new initiatives as good for the city's future and economy. The NYC Transit working group announced their plans in April. New York City's transit system will undergo a far-reaching overhaul in the next 15 years, including three new train lines, and possibly a new subway tunnel. The plan is likely to cost billions of dollars, perhaps to the tune of $32 billion. Commuter rail and subway upgrades include: The construction of an $8.7 billion Second Avenue Subway line
