I have an existing string `y="19,9,"` and I have to convert it into an array. I have seen a lot of answers but not working. A: You can use split function: `y='19,9,' arr = y.split(',') # [19, 9]`

Notice that you can use `str.split` or `str.split()`. Or, you can use `re.split` (which uses regex): `x = re.split(r',', y) # ['19', '9']` To import (use as) strings in Python, refer to How do I convert a string into a list? Q: google maps visualisation in Android after GPS has been turned off How do you make google maps go blank after the user has turned off their GPS? I have tried using `mMap.setMyLocationEnabled(false)`; and also using a intent to set this boolean to true in the Activity that uses the map, however nothing is visible. I have seen a few answers online about this but they all seem to involve some lag, which I am not experiencing. Can anybody help?

Thanks! A: Google Maps API v2 has a new `setMyLocationEnabled` function which works with `BatteryManager` to save battery. API Level 11 or higher is required. So if your build target is 11 or higher, then it will work without any lag. If you do not meet this requirement, then you can disable the location services before actually attempting to remove markers and so on. `public static boolean isG d0c515b9f4`
