A: Your Zygor-card is a WC(E) card and is tied to the WoW guild Bank, so if you log in as a member of a WoW guild, they will be tied to your account, so your card won't work. So you're "technically" locked out of these fun and interesting features. :) Q: Is it possible to prevent a class from being inherited when it is instantiated? Suppose I have a class A: class A: def __init__(self, foo): self.foo = foo self.f = A() # this class is instantiated twice, once as A and once as A.__subclass__() # some methods Now, A.__subclass__() is used in the initialization of class B: class B(A): def __init__(self, bar): self.bar = bar self.g = B() # now this instance is of class B # some methods The problem is that A.__subclass__() returns self.__class__, which is A here. I want this to be B. Is there a way to prevent A from being inherited when the sub-class is instantiated? Thank you in advance. A: You can't prevent it, but you can make it slightly less possible by using the metaclass mechanism, and specifically the isinstance() function. This forces Python to check for a metaclass override before checking for an inheritance edge case: class B(A): def __init__(self, bar): d0c515b9f4
