Q: How to limit the files in the mongodb documents? Consider there are many thousands of documents of a type 'invoices'. If an user enters an app, I want the app to limit the number of files in the invoice documents to just 1. Once user deletes all the other invoices files (if user has 1000 invoices), the app should roll the number of files to 1 again and allow the user to add more invoices. I cannot use embedded documents here because then I would have to create a new invoice for every invoice in the user's collection. This is not what I want. If I use a user collection, I cannot delete that user.
