This is the first sequel to the first title where you would have to play Buckets of Blood a few times. So don't worry about the previous experience you had with the game and start from scratch with the only difference being your bucking staff. Still having the same options you had to your play: Team Deathmatch, Domination, Shooting gallery, Cover and Race! Get ready for extended skirmishes full of multiple teams and more skills than a Cape Town skirt. Discover the final adventure of the so called "Foreign Legion", the standard-bearer of the highest order of the world. This took a long time to do, I do all the modeling in UDK, load and export as BSP and then import as a model into ZBrush, the next thing is to go in and make the textures, that was the most time consuming part of the whole thing, the textures are the same as in Buckets of Blood but rather than over a million polygons on the guy, now it's ton's of quads. My PC is not that old, I know, and I'm one of the most advanced gamers in the world so please don't ask me to explain why a certain model is made out of what. After I was done with the texture I did the modelling, these guys did the animation, and then polished it all off in ZBrush and rendered. The resources listed in the description section of each object are where the file can be found. Although they were made with later versions of ZBrush, I have tried to archive them so they can be used in earlier version. So you can still use them in version 2.1, I have tested it to be sure. Anyway here is the final result, I hope you will enjoy this... it was a lot of fun making it and I have had a blast playing it. Comments welcome, let me know if you like the game, and you're welcome to rate the game if you want. I'm aware that there is a complete lack of tutorials available for this game, so if someone is looking for a guide of how to use the game or even how to setup the game they can read this section. This game is more of a sequel of Buckets of Blood, and since it contains almost the same models, ZBrush files, modelling, texturing, rigging, animation, and rendering, the authors of that game had a small part in the creation of this one, they

In contrast to diabetic rodents, in humans naturally occurring physiological levels of incretin, the gastrointestinal hormone gastrin-releasing peptide (GRP) and the cholecystokinin analogs (CCK-4), induce postprandial glucagon secretion and improve glucose homeostasis in a condition known as incretin effect (IE). To investigate whether these peptide hormones induce a similar metabolic modification, essential-calorie-restricted (ER) obese and lean rats chronically infused with a GRP analogue were tested in vivo for these effects and for acute incretin effects. At 25 weeks, rats previously infused chronically with GRP were lighter than controls (P

You have a laptop and an old game you've played once or twice before, sitting on your desk. You open it up, click play and bask in the nostalgia of such an old game. And, before you know it, you realise you've been staring at the same screen for over 20 minutes and you know the feeling of a once-close friend-turned-enemy emerging from the fog of defeat, so you decide to load another level... and you get bored of that game as well, you just load some other game and do that... and it's not an RPG, not a space game, not a beautiful game, not a anything game, and yet you still continue doing that. And before you know it you're watching TV for another 30 minutes and you realise that you're losing your house to the buy out, and it's only been a couple hours since you got in. So, you try to take a couple days off to relax a little... but by the third day, you are using up all of your spare time and go back to work like you were working before! By the end of the week, you're just throwing in the towel and starting college, just so you can play some other game on your phone or laptop. [/i] By this point, you realise that this is a very boring way to go through life. And after you come home, you fire up your laptop to log in to your online gaming community, but you haven't been there for so long. And before you know it, you start regretting all of those years of gaming and how it used to be for you, and then you start looking at your window and remember how beautiful the sunsets used to be, and how nice the people on the trains used to be and how nice the redone barn you passed that one time looked. And all of a sudden you realise that all that video game addiction really sucked, because you never thought that one day you'd need to take a

Update 2/2016: Arkanoid EX now has a official 2D version, check out the updated trailer here: Update 2015: V2 of Arkanoid EX is almost complete! There are 5 more levels to be programmed. There will be at least one new feature in V2. Bugs are also being fixed all the time! Please be aware that there will be bugs in the game, and there may be code changes depending on what I have programmed at that time. But the game should still play fine in most cases. Also, progress is saved automatically once you reboot your phone. About This Game: Updates happen very rarely. My main focus is to put the game on as many 3DS systems and DS systems as possible. But I'm also updating the website and the game itself. So if you are looking for updates, it's better to just check the website. About this Game: This Game is a continuation of Arkanoid EX. It has it's own levels, and has several different features that Arkanoid EX did not have. The levels are split up in 3 categories: Levels you select when you start the game: 7 x Main Levels, 7 x Mini Levels, 7 x Bonus Levels. The main feature of Arkanoid EX is having the player break blocks. There is a different colored block, and the goal of the game is to break them in order to stop the blocks from being caught by the paddle. But now, every break actually counts. If you break a block, you get to see how many pellets you need to break it. If you break 10 pellets, the block is immediately broken, and you get 1 bonus. If you break 1 pellet, you get nothing. However, you can still try to break the block. The other features of Arkanoid EX were: There was a unique twist called the Arkanoid Warp. A ball of blue energy would shoot out, and go through the paddle. If you pressed the paddle right as the ball was falling on you, you could break the blocks and the ball would destroy everything in it's path, instantly. If you made it into the hole at the end of the stage, you got a cool feature called The Bonus Ball. The ball would go all around the level, bouncing off blocks and destroying every block in it's path. If you were on a wall, you would get a cool bonus feature,
