The data, which is used to understand a player's movement, trajectory and speed of movement will also be used to create the fastest players in FIFA. A player's acceleration and movement speed is generated from the motion data and added to the already existing technology. In addition, this motion data will enable analysts to gain an in-depth understanding of a player's abilities and attributes with more data points, enabling them to determine with more accuracy whether a player can become a great footballer. AI is also enhanced with AI Engine 3.0. The engine continues to evolve FIFA's ability to respond to the movement, positioning and formation of the opposition, and is further enhanced to be more efficient, providing a more fluid game experience. As well as this, FIFA "Pro Player HD" has been enhanced with a new user interface. This includes quicker access to the player panel, and improved match creation in the pre-match setup. In addition, greater control over team tactics is now given to coaches, and a more responsive engine is used to help the player interact with the virtual pitch. "The world of football is becoming more and more global," says Greg Markel, Executive Producer on FIFA. "We're increasingly recognising the value of players from a variety of different backgrounds, and we believe that in the 21st century, the world of football has embraced players from an increasing number of cultures. This is why we're adding the latest FIFA players from Korea, Germany, Brazil and the USA to the Elite XI roster, and this year we'll be improving the integrity of the game and its authenticity to ensure our global players feel true to their time and place."
