Rename the subtitle file exactly the same as the movie or series file, so you have two files. Play video in VLC. You should now see... text on top of the video. This is the subtitles, but without sound. If the subtitle file has a .srt extension, then VLC will read it from it as an audio file. To use subtitles in the program, you need to rename the subtitle file exactly the same as the movie or series file, and in this file, instead of the .srt extension, you need to specify .srt.
