the "mode" is a string which is passed to the generate() function. it controls the protection level the keys will use. they can be "cmp", "ctr", "enc" or "dec". the "cmp" mode uses the chip erase commands, "ctr" uses the block erase commands (when the first key is made) and "enc" uses the write protect commands. the "signing" key will be a key which is a 256 bit rsa secret, and it will be marked as "psk". this means that the private key will be in a standard der format, and it will have the associated public key. generates the key pk[0]: the key is encrypted and base64 encoded and returned as an element of a "o" tag generates the key sk[0]: the key is encrypted and base64 encoded and returned as an element of a "o" tag generates the key key[0]: the key is encrypted and base64 encoded and returned as an element of a "o" tag decrypts the key: decrypts the key pk[0]: the encrypted key is base64 decoded and returned as an element of a "o" tag decrypts the key sk[0]: the encrypted key is base64 decoded and returned as an element of a "o" tag decrypts the key key[0]: the encrypted key is base64 decoded and returned as an element of a "o" tag encrypts the given data: encrypts the given data data: the plaintext key is base64 encoded and returned as an element of a "o" tag encrypts the given data data: the plaintext key is base64 encoded and returned as an element of a "o" tag 5ec8ef588b
